

How to Talk to Kids About Race in Today's World

Thursday, March 2nd - 6:30-8:30 pm in the Multipurpose Room
Chabot Elementary School, 6686 Chabot Road, Oakland

SPECIAL COMMUNITY EVENT – All Are Welcome!

This is a continuation of the prior work and conversations we have been having about talking about race with our children. Specifically we will be talking about questions or concerns that might be coming up in the context of our political climate. Please bring your questions and insights to share. Parents, teachers and caregivers will come away with an understanding of basic developmental awareness of children in regards to race and how to support our children's learning and thinking about race.

Allison Briscoe-Smith, PhD is a clinical psychologist who specializes in young children, trauma and race. She is a professor at the Wright Institute and spends much of her time supporting schools and non-profits in their work on trauma and cultural accountability.

Childcare is provided for children 5 – 12. Please call 654-4884 to reserve a spot.
